

Visual life-logging study

How to handle the camera

- The camera takes photographs every 5 minutes
- You can delete the last 5 minutes of photographs by pressing the delete button on the camera (or later when reviewing the photos in the evening)
- Please charge the camera every day
- The camera should tolerate a very light rain shower but anything heavier please try to keep it dry (put inside clothing if heavy rain).
- To stop the camera taking photos either turn it off or put it away (e.g. in your pocket)
- If anything happens to your camera (e.g. it is stolen or breaks) please alert us as soon as possible. Please do not try to fix it yourself.

Photography rules

We ask that you respect the laws and guidelines around public photography. In particular you must:

- Respect rules about taking photographs in public places (e.g. if you see a “no photography allowed” sign).
- Respect other people’s wishes to not be photographed. If anyone objects to you wearing the camera in their presence then put it in your pocket. If anyone asks that a photo of them be deleted simply press the delete button. When you review the photos if you see an image of someone who requested that you not photograph them please delete it at that time.
- Please delete photographs with any nudity. It is specifically prohibited to keep (or share) photographs of naked people or photographs that would otherwise compromise an individual’s safety or reputation.
- If you observe other members participating in this study using the technology inappropriately or illegally, please get in contact with the researcher.

Short version daily photograph review instructions

- To run the image reviewer software you will need Java 8 installed on your computer (<https://java.com/en/download/>)
- Take the SD card out of the camera and put it in your card reader (usb stick), then plug the card reader into your computer
- Open the image reviewer software and select the folder that contains your photos from the day
- After a moment the photos will load, and you can step through the instructions – first deleting photographs as you wish (these will be permanently deleted), and then completing all of the rating questions
- At the end of the program you will be able to save your responses to the same folder as the images, on the SD card.
- Please do not modify file/folder names, or delete any files (except through the app).
- Remember to put the SD card back into the camera, ready for the next day.
